The Approaching City Election.

A general sentiment prevails in Louisville that the city has already suffered too much by prospective party rule. For two years we have had party law and mob-law, instead of the law of the land. As a consequence, confidence was destroyed, and the city and her interests have entirely suffered; indeed, for a time her ruin seemed complete. The causes resulting so seriously to the city had their origin, as is well-known, in the mismanagement of her local offices. The test of fitness for office was the loudest expression of party zeal. Hence, under the new order of things inaugurated in 1855, the municipal offices of the city of Louisville, in a great measure, passed into new hands—into the control of men, who, upon their own merits, without the aid of party machinery, would never have dreamt of the office, nor the office dreamt of them.

The people, or many of them, silently submitted to this proceeding out of the offices which so much affected their interests; and never, until the city's end was prostrated and her population driven away, did they look to the causes of these disasters. Men wholly irresponsible in property, credit, and character, were, by the action of a false proscriptive party, placed in power, not to serve the city and guard her best interests, but to do the works of a party whose dictation was law to them, over and beyond the plain rules laid down in the laws and ordinances for their guidance and action. It is plain, then, that the people would tire of this thing. While it achieved party triumph, it triumphed over the city. This was not wished, and indeed was not contended by the great mass who stood by. The well-meaning of all parties, who have any common fellowship of interest and wish for the city's prosperity, must deplore that rule of conduct which seeks to fasten upon one people, from a mere fiction, men to fill all the offices necessary to the machinery of our municipal government.

The Know-Nothing party, numbering some 1,500 or 1,600 men, through their counsels, nominated the candidates from their own body to govern sixty-five or seventy thousand people!

The many thousand have nothing to do but silently submit to the action of some fifteen hundred men. Now, we protest, in the name of Louisville and all her people, outside of the band of Know-Nothings, against this thing.

It is time we had a Mayor and a Common Council for the city of Louisville, not for the mere nominees of a dominant party. The importance of our local interests—the exigencies of the times demand it. The people desire it, and are fit ready to take any step forward to the accomplishment. For it is a great reform to liberate a city of the proscriptive party rule under which it is laboring. There are men good and true, who have the welfare of Louisville at least at the same achievement in view.

It is just as plain that even if we could do all the ceiling, and floor, and plaster, and cover the city this way, we could not gratify the wishes and interests of the people.

New Paper in Washington.—John P. Heiss, Esq., will establish a new Democratic paper in Washington City, the 1st of April. The new paper is called the "Times," and will be devoted principally to the current transactions of the Government.

Suspension.—The Local Inspectors of the District of Nashville have suspended for ten days Elihu Carroll, Cumberland River Pilot, for running the J. G. Cline in collision with the U.S. Revenue Cutter, the "Lafayette." He is in this city at present, for the purpose of reclaiming his vessel.

Associate Justice McLean proceeded to express his views in the case of Dred Scott again. After stating the facts relative to the subject, he held that the question is really defective. It had never been held necessary to constitute a citizen a voter in order to qualify him for an elector. Such a construction would be inconsistent with the nature and purposes of the Constitution, as expressed in its language. He would construe that clause of the Constitution thus—Congress shall have power to make all needful rules and regulations respecting those tracts of country without the limits of the United States, and which the United States have or may acquire by cession or otherwise. The right to legislate in the Territories is given to Congress by the Constitution, which reserves the power to make all needful rules and regulations respecting the territory of the United States, to such territory only as owned by the United States at the time of the adoption of the Constitution. He was not aware that such a suggestion had ever before been made.

Four distinct acquisitions of territory have been made, and six States formed upon them.

Congress could not indirectly affect any property throughout Louisiana when it was acquired, so it could exclude all descriptions of property. The right to legislate in the Territories is given to Congress by the Constitution, which reserves the power to make all needful rules and regulations respecting the territory of the United States, to such territory only as owned by the United States at the time of the adoption of the Constitution, and cannot be repealed by Congress, and that the act of 1820, known as the Missouri Compromise, violates the leading features of the Constitution, or which the Union depends, and which secures to all citizens common rights. He therefore held that the act was void, and concurred with his brother Judges that the plaintiff, Dred Scott, is a slave, and was one when this suit was brought into the Circuit Court of Missouri, and was reversed, and the cause remained for a new trial.

The Great Holland Remedy!—Berkeley's Holland Bitter—Persons suffering from sick headache, will find in Berkeley's Holland Bitters a safe, pleasant remedy. It soothes the brain, and relieves the mind, as directed, and creates a healthy appetite, without doubt, a most delightful preparation, and a actual remedy. The fact that it is now a very popular medicine throughout all the Holland settlements—Wisconsin, New York, Michigan, Illinois, and Indiana, speaks much in its favor. See advertisement in another column.
